CONFIDENTIALITY

While most of what is discussed in sessions is confidential, there are exceptions:

- If I believe that a client will harm themselves or another person, or is experiencing a psychotic episode, I will seek assistance. I will also try to talk about this with the individual involved. Child abuse is reported.
- I comply with legal requirements, e.g., if file notes are subpoenaed.
- I will discuss cases in supervision in order to maintain a quality practice, but will not disclose the client's identification.
- In all other matters, I will seek client's permission prior to discussing their situation with any other person.
- Children below the age of 16 will only be seen with the written permission of at least one parent or guardian.

PRIVACY

Personal information that is relevant to your situation will be recorded and held securely, including clients names, contact information, medical history and other relevant information. This collection of personal information will be a necessary part of the psychological assessment and treatment that is conducted. I will protect client's privacy by following the Australian Privacy Principles and Health Records Act, as described in my Privacy Policy which is available on my website www.psychotherapy-centre.com.au. The Privacy Policy contains information about how to access and seek correction of personal information, how to lodge a complaint about management of personal information.

ETHICAL STANDARDS

I follow the ethical standards set by the Psychology Board of Australia, the Australian Psychological Society, and the Gestalt Association of Australia and New Zealand. Professional Indemnity Insurance is held with IH Group Ltd.
